I heard that pay was going up this April, but my employer says he can't afford to pay me any more money. How can I find out what I'm entitled to?

Most people over 16 who work, including casual workers, are entitled to get paid at least the National Minimum Wage. There are some exceptions – call the Acas helpline (0300 123 1100) to check.

The hourly rates went up on 1 April 2024 as follows:

Workers aged 21 and over (down from age 23) - increase from £10.42 to £11.44.
(This is called the National Living Wage)

Workers aged 18 - 20 - increase from £7.49 to £8.60

Workers aged 16 -17 - increase from £5.28 to £6.40

Apprentices - increase from £5.28 to £6.40

Get advice if you're not paid for travelling between appointments, training, or being 'on call', or if your employer takes money from your wages for accommodation. If you're not being paid the minimum wage when you are entitled to it, speak to your employer. If you're not getting anywhere, contact Acas to help you work out your options. Acas is an organisation that provides independent support to help sort out employment disputes. If you need more help at any point, you can get advice from South Lakes Citizens Advice.

Arnside Guides Plant Sale

Saturday 18th May 10am - 12 noon
at Levens Institute

There will be a usual coffee morning run by the Guides, local stall holders and of course the plants!

Profits will be split equally between the Guides (individual girls fund raising for camps), and Levens Playing Fields.

The Churchyard Working Party at St Peter's Church in Heversham met again on the 23rd March and had a very successful meeting.

The churchyard is looking in good shape as we move into spring and credit is due to those who take part in its maintenance.

That last meeting took place on a very cold morning, a big thank you to all who took part. The next meeting will be on Saturday 27th April from 9.30am - 12.30pm. If you would like to contribute to caring for this great village asset which is open to the public, has public footpaths through it and benches to relax on, you will be very welcome

Don't feel that you must attend for the full session, it is much more relaxed than that; come when you can and leave when you have to.

If you come along you are bound to make a useful contribution, will quite likely enjoy yourself and may even meet old and new friends. Meet at the main church gate, bring gloves and, if you have them, loppers and/or secateurs; there is always plenty of cutting back to do. Even if you don't have any tools you will be able to make a valuable contribution.

Letter from The Revd.
Bryan Kerr

Dear Friends,

Professor Richard Dawkins is perhaps the best-known proponent of 'New Atheism'. He famously pronounced in 2012, "I don't despise religious people; I despise what they stand for."

However, during a ten-minute LBC radio interview on Easter Sunday, the biologist praised cathedrals, hymns and the 'fundamentally decent' ethos of Christianity. "I call myself a cultural Christian," he said before hastily adding, "I'm not a believer." Dawkins is glad that the old faith is still around: 'I sort of feel at home in the Christian ethos.' He notes with approval that Christian belief is declining in Britain: "But I would not be happy if we lost all our cathedrals and our beautiful parish churches. So I count myself a cultural Christian." He pronounced Christianity 'a fundamentally decent religion.' This may well chime with some of the listeners to the interview, people uncertain of what to believe but who might sing the occasional carol at Christmas. Even the Professor himself admits to enjoying that.

In Dawkins' view, it is harmless and even healthy to participate in Christian culture a little, for there is a 'beauty' and 'decency' to it, but it is deeply mistaken to cross the line into 'belief'. But Christian culture would not exist without the existence of committed believers. We can see a tension in this thinking = pro-Christian culture/anti-Christian faith. One commentator described it as 'poisoning the roots while demanding the fruits.'

Can we as individuals or a society straddle this contradiction? Is it possible to cultivate a Christian-like 'ethos' while detaching itself from the faith that inspired it?

It is noteworthy that the interview was broadcast on Easter Day. For millennia Christians have focused on a victim of injustice tortured to death for love's sake and we have responded by worshipping him. This belief, grounded in the events of Good Friday and Easter, produced and formed a 'cross-shaped ethic' that takes the side of the weak, the forgotten, the victims of injustice, the voiceless.

Christian ethics do not arise from warm feelings within. They have their roots in the identity of Jesus Christ himself, not simply a moral teacher, but our Creator living God's way in God's creation, a unique ethical authority above all others. They are centred on the death and resurrection of Christ, the ultimate act of selfless living and giving. Not only did the God-man sacrifice himself in weakness for the sake of others, he is alive again, offering a new life ethically and spiritually to those who come to him.

As conqueror of death, he gives eternal significance to earthly actions, even to a cup of cold water given in kindness. The heart of Christian living and experience today is that Christ lives within a person supernaturally; his Holy Spirit leads and guides a Christian believer, making them more Christ-like and their ethics more cross-shaped.

That is not to say that other people cannot live by their own moral code as decent individuals within society. And we know that Christians can fail their Lord in how they live. But a distinctly Christian ethos is supernatural. It is the outworking of the supernatural Spirit of God in the life of the Church and in the individual believer; it is centred on the supernatural events of Easter; it rests on the supernatural identity of Jesus Christ.

The Revd Glen Scrivener, a Christian commentator, summarised the issue: "Christians believe that Jesus rose from that Jerusalem tomb. Dawkins believes all life arose from non-life, and without a God of resurrection to work the wonder. At that point it's a case of 'choose your miracle'."

Every Blessing, Revd Bryan Kerr

WRITING A WILL?

Once you have made provision for your loved ones, why not consider making a lasting gift to God, by leaving a legacy to His church? A gift in your will to your local church is one of the most valuable and lasting ways you can continue to support its mission and ministry within your community.

The Church of England has partnered with Farewill to provide a free will-writing service, which can be used to benefit other churches also.
